

HINT "CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE" MAY BE CRASH CAUSE

Searching Inquiry Evident As Result of Death for Eleven

AIRLINER IN FLAMES
Disclosed That Radio Beams In Some Instances Operate Improperly

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(INS)—The crash of the TWA airliner near Uniontown, Pa., that killed 11 persons may lead to a searching inquiry of charges of criminal negligence, waste and untrained personnel in the U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce.

This was revealed to International News Service today by a source close to the Senate Air-Safety Committee as Col. Harold E. Hartney, technical adviser, began the committee's independent inquiry into the tragedy.

The committee will be urged to recall J. A. Mount, former chief of maintenance of the bureau. He testified he was discharged because he told superiors "criminal negligence" is prevalent throughout the bureau.

Mount said a tour of landing fields and air terminals under the bureau's supervision disclosed that in many instances radio beams were unreliable, costly equipment was allowed to rot and that personnel was untrained.

"To my mind," the informant said, "Mount's testimony now takes on added significance, especially in view of the fact that TWA blames the crash on radio beam failure, and I shall urge that the committee question him and that if his charges prove to be true, the proper steps be taken to correct the situation."

Mount's testimony regarding unreliable radio beams was recently substantiated before the committee by David L. Behneke, chief of the Air Pilots' Association.

"I know of instances where beams have been improperly operating for quite a considerable length of time," he testified.

Senator Copeland (D) of New York, chairman of the committee, is prepared to begin an investigation of the Uniontown tragedy as soon as he receives a preliminary report from Hartney. He said:

"I am very much distressed. All we have learned so far is that they were doing instrument flying in bad weather, and at the moment there is nothing to say except to express sympathy for the friends and relatives of those who were lost."

High Winds Damage Trees and Wires Here
High winds starting last night at about 10:45, blew down wires, interrupted electrical service, and tore branches off trees.

The wind started to blow at about 10:45 and a falling wire at Cedar and Walnut streets caused the fire alarm to sound. Firemen responded but found that their services were not needed.

Motorists reported this morning that along the country roads, clouds of dust blocked their vision.

Street lights were put out of commission here, last evening.

PERKASIE TO DRAFT ZONING ORDINANCE

Will Prepare Ordinance and Present It In The Near Future

TO ACQUIRE LAND

PERKASIE, Apr. 8.—As a result of a lengthy discussion which took place at the meeting of Borough Council, Monday evening, this borough may eventually get a zoning ordinance. This is a subject which had been under discussion by Council members for many years.

During the evening Council received an application from Harry Neamand, who sought permission to build an annex to his dwelling on Chestnut street at Sixth. A study of the plans revealed that it was proposed to erect the annex out to the street line.

Council, however, refrained from granting the permit, and following a lengthy discussion President Benfield was authorized to appoint a committee to draft a zoning ordinance. This included Councilmen Harold Price, Paul Daub, Roy Benner, William Stater and Lloyd Harr.

Solicitor Robert H. Grim was authorized by Council to begin condemnation proceedings with the view of acquiring a tract of land facing Branch creek.

About a year ago Council purchased a tract of about 40 acres along the creek and at present it is being converted into a park by the W. P. A. At that time, however, Council did not receive title to a strip of land about 300 feet long and facing Branch creek.

In order to complete the park project this strip of land will have to be owned by the borough and as the result of the condemnation proceedings Council hopes to take title to the property which now belongs to the estate of David Harr.

If the borough acquires this tract, it will own all land on both sides of the Branch creek from the Sellersville line north to Walnut street, this borough.

Council asked for bids for the construction of about 150 feet of sidewalk on Park avenue, between Third and Fourth streets. The property facing this street is privately owned and the owner has refused to build a sidewalk.

Council now has taken the matter into its own hands. It will proceed with the building of the walk and charge the expense to the account of the owner of the tract.

Council also asked for bids for sand, stone and cement for the W. P. A. sidewalk construction in the borough and for a new borough truck.

At the March meeting of Council a resident of the borough appeared with an offer to sell a building lot near Eighth and Vine streets. The borough

THIRTY-THREE MEN MEET FOR SCOUT COURSE

Keen Interest Shown at Meeting Held in Presbyterian Church

OFFER FOUR COURSES

The keen interest in the Scouting University Course of training in Cub, Scout, and Seascout Leadership has continued. Thirty-three men gathered last evening in the basement of the Bristol Presbyterian Church to exchange experiences; and to listen to the presentations of the special speakers. Arrangements for the use of the church facilities were through the kindness of Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, the pastor.

The four courses offered last evening were arranged by the Training Committee of the Bucks County Scouting Council, Chairman Walter W. Pitonka. Local divisional leader of training for the Southern Division is Field Commissioner William L. Schofield, Morrisville. Scout Executive William F. Livermore is the technical advisor to the committee.

Skipper Charles Walters gave the fourth session of his lectures on Ship Navigation and Piloting. Hon. Thomas B. Stockham spoke on the subject of "An Adequate Yearly Outdoor Program" for the Principles of Leadership Group. Other speakers in the Principles of Leadership Group were Troop Committeeman Horace C. Prevost on "Ceremonies in the Scouting Program," Field Commissioner William L. Schofield on "Troop Administration," and

Firemen and The Auxiliary Women Have Merry Time

CROYDON, Apr. 8.—On Monday evening at the Croydon fire house, the firemen were entertained by the auxiliary after their short business meeting, when the report of the St. Patrick's party was presented. The firemen entered in a body. The president, Charles Winchester, secretary, Messrs. Jost and English were called on for remarks. An invitation was extended the Auxiliary to meet with the firemen on May 12th.

Supper was served and each man and woman gave a number. This being a leap year the woman called her number and the man having the same escorted her in the supper march.

On Easter Monday night there will be a party, everybody being invited. The new social committee includes: Mrs. C. Friday, chairlady; Mrs. B. Ahart, Mrs. W. Batholoma, Mrs. B. Earnest, Mrs. W. Bowyer, Mrs. O. Domowicz, serving three months.

Contests Follow Meeting Of The Social Circle

The Social Circle of First Baptist Church held a meeting last evening in the Sunday School room. Hostesses were Misses Mary Wanner, Marie Watson, Edith and Charlotte Wise, Mrs. Fred Weik, Mrs. Charles Wright, Mrs. G. Williams, Mrs. Robert Weik. Plans were completed for a bread demonstration, an entertainment, and a treasure hunt scheduled for April 24th. A social time followed. Games were played and prizes awarded. For the egg race, Mrs. Russell Johnson received a prize; Mrs. C. Schroder and Mrs. J. Bauer, the number game; Mrs. C. Nash and Mrs. F. Gould peanut scramble. About 45 were present. Refreshments were served.

COMPLETE DETAILS FOR SCOUTS' BIRTHDAY

Every Committee Has Its Work Now Well in Hand For Saturday

EXPECT LARGE CROWD

Every committee organized to make possible a delightful welcome to the Bucks County Scouting Council when it comes to Bristol, reported their work about done, at the dinner meeting at the Keystone Hotel, last evening. The reports submitted to Chairman Walter W. Pitonka proved the devoted, and energetic work done by the local civic leaders. Vice-Chairman William Lange, St. Landalusia, has been co-operative with the administrative details.

The Harriman Hospital has offered its services for emergency work through Dr. George T. Fox. The response of the Bristol Rotary and Exchange clubs to the "call" of Finance Chairman Hampton Morris resulted in all necessary funds raised. The refreshment committee comprising Thomas Jones, Lester Hellwig and Lester B. Shoemaker have been promised cocoa and cakes for every visitor by national food concerns. There is a possibility of some extra "eats" through the efforts of the committee making new contacts.

Mrs. Charles Rathke, of the Methodist Church choir, will be assisted by the members of the choir in preparing part of the tasty morsels. The balance of the servings will be given by the women of the Presbyterian Church. Both of the official boards of the two churches have made available their basements for the preparation and serving. Mr. Robert C. Ruchel will direct the movement of the visitors through the Presbyterian Church, and Lester B. Shoemaker will do the same for the Methodist.

Manager Edward Lynn is selecting the films for the afternoon show, was the report of "movie" chairman David Hertzler. Dr. J. J. Willaman has had the co-operation of four musical units to provide music, with the possibility of a fifth. The Bristol police are going to be augmented by the Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol to direct traffic. Bristol's "finest" will lead the parade. Full co-operation has been given in all of the arrangements for the parade by Councilman Roy Fry, and Chief of Police Linford Jones. Window show cards have already been placed by the local Scout Troops through the arrangements made by Chairman Charles Moorman, and the supervision of the distribution by District Commissioner Herbert A. Pettit. There will be additional "Welcome Scouting" window

Threaten Dynamite "Answer"

Harrisburg, April 8.—A threat that "bootleg" miners would "answer with dynamite" any arrests by coal company police, was interjected into the sweeping controversy by the unhired miners and operators today.

Here to confer with Governor George H. Earle on the shooting of two bootleg miners allegedly by special police of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company last Friday night, Earl Humphrey, president of the Independent Anthracite Miners' Association, revealed certain independent miners had threatened to reply.

Investigators of the Department of Justice inquiry into the shooting near Hazleton are to report at the "earliest possible moment."

Coal and iron police were outlawed by the last session of the Legislature.

Wires Relief Funds

Miami, Fla., April 8.—As President Roosevelt headed toward the Florida coast this morning, to end his 2 1/2 weeks' vacation, he radioed an order from the temporary White House, the Potomac, allocating $2,000,500 of WPA funds for immediate rehabilitation work in the tornado area of Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina. A wireless report from Admiral Cary T. Grayson, head of the Red Cross, placed the death toll at 425, and seriously injured at 1,725, and moved that the President order an emergency fund to relief.

Borah in Lead

Milwaukee, Apr. 8.—Early returns from scattered precincts today gave support to William E. Borah at the Republican convention, over the Wisconsin executive committee.

According to unofficial reports received here, the Borah ticket is running slightly ahead with some 300 of the state's precincts reported.

Daniel Hoan, Milwaukee Socialist mayor for the past twenty years, held a 2,000 majority over Sheriff Joseph J. Shinnars, in the mayoralty contest.

HELTER-SKELTER TAXES

It is increasingly clear Congress cannot enact an even half-way satisfactory tax bill at this session. Presidential and Congressional campaigns, which will soon be going full blast, make non-political thinking well nigh impossible. Expediency rather than economic considerations dominates.

Unless Congress is prepared to enact sounder legislation than now in prospect it would be better to postpone the tax bill until after election. A bill passed in the heat of the campaign means adding another helter-skelter story to our crazy tax structure.

It will be said that to postpone would be to complicate balancing the budget. This criticism is not to be lightly dismissed. Continuing deficits, loose spending because of easy borrowing, are insidious. But passing an unsound tax bill, such as the undistributed profits tax proposed by the Treasury, is worse. Consequently postponement, in the hope and expectation of a general revision in 1937, a non-election year, is the better procedure.

The new tax is recommended because it is politically painless in an election year. It would be painless for the moment only. There is no such thing as a painless tax. Let us grant that public men, dependent upon public support, will play politics. You may not like the fact, but you cannot ignore it. You may condemn the fact, but that does not change it. You also know that a legislator is a little more free to follow his own judgment after an election, which takes care of his immediate future. This should mean that we could get a better tax bill in 1937 than in 1936.

We might as well resign ourselves to the necessity of heavier taxation; at the same time, with this resignation should go a more effective demand for retrenchment. New taxation is inevitable, but retrenchment must accompany it, for the government that does not retrench is inviting collapse.

AUTOS AND STEEL

Sales of new automobiles, gaining after the somewhat retarding effect of the unusually severe winter, are now holding firm at 100,000 a week. This is considerably in excess of the number necessary to replace worn-out vehicles, estimated at 3,000,000 annually.

The only barometer considered more reliable as a business index is steel production. Steel mills are now running at 62 per cent of capacity, the highest rate since 1929. Autos and steel are in the lead in the upturn, leaving no room for doubt that genuine recovery is taking place.

Weekly improvement, compared to a similar period last year, is also taking place in freight car loadings, bank clearings and output of electric power. Retail department store sales, too, are gaining.

Whether what is taking place is business recovery or improvement, it is as welcome as the flowers in May.

Refinancing is a way of getting out of debt by going into debt, while reforestation is a means of getting out of the wilderness by planting trees.

"A rum is distilled of maple syrup, and now we hear that a cordial is being made of bananas." Well—just as long as it isn't a song.

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR" by ROY CHANSLOR

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful Ruth Tyler, blind daughter of former District Attorney Daniel Tyler, is psychic and foretells murders, but is powerless to reveal enough information so that the tragedies can be averted. These manifestations occur while Ruth, a talented musician, plays her violin—and always at night. The girl becomes terror-stricken and suddenly this strange power grips her. Her father enlists the aid of Dr. Jan Karase, noted psychiatrist, but as Karase is working on another case, he sends his young assistant, Nat Benson, to study the girl. Nat is introduced to Ruth as the son of her father's college chum, in the city on a visit. One night, when Ruth has a spell, Nat prevents Tyler from trying to soothe her, with the result her vision is keener than ever and she is able to reveal the name of the person marked for death. This time it is Paul Y. Gordon, an international banker. Nat telephones Gordon.

CHAPTER VII

"A lean man with a hooked nose sat in the small lodge which guarded the main gate to the Westchester estate of Paul Y. Gordon. He was tilted back, comfortably in a chair, his feet resting before a gleaming red-hot stove, but his eyes were open, very much so, and they never left the roadway which shone white in the darkness in front of the gate. Across his knees lay a sawed-off shotgun.

Behind him, brooding over the countryside, the huge house sprawled, a hundred yards back from the road, dark and silent. Inside, secure in the knowledge that trusted armed men guarded every entrance, the master slept alone in his suite on the top floor. Below, in their various chambers, slumbered his household, unaware that any precautions to ensure security were necessary.

Off to the right the lean man heard sounds approaching. He leaned forward. That would be Nelson, probably—Nelson, who made the complete rounds of all the outposts every hour. But he wanted to be certain. The lean man rose, holding the shotgun easily. Yes, it was Nelson.

The squat, tow-headed Swede paused only to pass the time of night and went on, toward the next guard. And the lean man tilted back once more in his chair. Then the telephone rang—not the intercommunicating phone which connected all the scattered lodges, but the trunk-line phone. Lazily wondering who could be calling at such an hour, the lean man answered.

In his top-floor retreat, Paul Gordon, always a light sleeper, heard the first tinkle of the phone from the main gate. Wide awake immediately, he seized the receiver, his nerves taut. It was Cooke at the main gate.

"There's a feller on the wire says he's got to speak to you, personal, right away," said Cooke's voice. "Says it's very important."

"What feller is calling at this hour?" demanded Gordon, irritated. "Find out what he wants. There was a low murmur over the wire, Cooke talking into the other phone. Gordon's irritation turned to curiosity. It couldn't be a business matter. His close associates knew his private number. Who could be calling on the regular trunk wire at this ungodly hour?

"Says his name's Benson," said Cooke's voice. "Nat Benson. Says the matter's urgent."

"Benson?" said Gordon. "Never heard of him. Tell him to call my secretary in the morning."

"Says he's calling for Mr. Daniel Tyler," Cooke went on, after a moment. "Tyler that used to be D. A."

"Oh," said Gordon. He knew Tyler by name and reputation. But who would use Tyler's name to call him in the middle of the night? He granted impatiently.

"Ask him what he wants," he said.

There was another low murmur, then Cooke's voice, anxious:

"This guy says it's a matter of life and death, boss; you better talk to 'im."

"All right," Gordon growled. "Put him on."

In a moment he heard a clear, intense voice on the wire.

"This is Nat Benson, Mr. Gordon—secretary to Mr. Tyler. We have reason to believe that your life is in danger; and we—"

"What's that?" Gordon demanded. "Your life is in danger," the voice repeated. "We want to see you, and explain the first thing in the morning."

"What is it you're driving at?" said Gordon sharply.

"I can't explain on the phone," said the voice. "But both Mr. Tyler and I—"

"Can't you tell me what information you have?" demanded Gordon.

"In the morning," said the voice. "Meanwhile, take the utmost precautions for the balance of the night. You can confirm this call by asking

"Good night," she said. Gordon, feeling slightly foolish, returned to his room, but not to sleep.

The day was bright and only slightly windy; so Tyler decided on the open car. Ruth wore a warm coat, and Nat tucked a robe about her snugly before he took the wheel. He headed northward, the powerful car humming.

Once out of the city they obtained specific directions from a motorcycle patrolman and continued.

Presently they came to the side road described by the policeman and turned off. Five miles back, he had said, a huge house on a rolling hill—

She sat up in the road, flung her hair back and blinked up at them, the sun in her eyes.

Information for Mr. Tyler's number.

"Right," said Gordon. "Hang up, and I'll call you back."

Puzzled, alarmed and vaguely annoyed, Gordon obtained the Tyler number from Information and put through a call. The same voice answered.

"What time may we come?" it asked.

"Eleven," said Gordon, and hung up.

He stared at the receiver for a long moment. Cold perspiration stood out on his upper lip. He wiped it, nervously. Then he called Cooke.

"Have you seen or heard anything?" he demanded.

"Not a thing, boss," said Cooke.

"What'd the guy have to say?"

"He warned me I was in danger," said Gordon. "Keep your eyes and ears open and pass the word along."

"Kayo," said Cooke.

Paul Gordon sank back on the bed. He pulled the covers close about him. But still he was cold. For a long time he lay straining for the slightest sound. Everything was quiet. Presently, unable to allay his uneasiness, he got up, donned dressing-gown and slippers, and went out into the hall.

He proceeded softly down the stairs, two floors. He hesitated in front of the door to his wife's apartment, the apartment she had occupied since his illness, two months now. Then he knocked, a low knock. After a moment she answered, and he entered. She sat up in bed, her mass of lovely black hair framing her olive face.

"Carlotia?" he said. "I—am you all right?"

"All right?" she said. "Why—of course."

He went close to her, smiled down at her dark beauty, stroked her hair. "Silly of me," he said. "But I couldn't sleep."

He leaned down and kissed her forehead.

"Sorry I woke you, darling," he said. "Good night."

She lifted her face and gave him a slight little kiss, smiled.

side. Nat increased speed. As they rounded a slight curve, he slammed on the brakes, screeching, and they came to an abrupt stop just behind a long rakish yellow roadster.

It was apparently stalled, but no one was in sight. Nat stared curiously at the yellow car. Then he grinned as he glanced down at the road beside it. Two absurdly high-heeled slippers toes up, protruded from under the car.

They wriggled slightly, and then two sheer-stockinged legs appeared, and after them a girl, clad in a skirt and a silk sweater the exact color of the roadster. She wore no hat, and a flood of golden hair half covered her face.

She sat up in the road, flung her hair back and blinked up at them, the sun in her eyes. Both Nat and Tyler laughed. Her left cheek and her nose were smeared with oil.

"Hello," she said.

"Hello," Nat answered.

She scrambled quickly to her feet, dabbing at her nose with one hand, but only succeeding in spreading the oil.

"What's the trouble?" Nat asked.

"It just won't work," the girl said ruefully. "How about a lift?"

Nat hesitated, and glanced at Tyler.

"We're only going a mile or two," Tyler said. "Just to the Gordon place."

"That's far enough," said the girl. "I'm Doris Gordon."

"Come ahead, then," said Nat.

The girl reached into the seat of the roadster, pulled out a small handbag, glanced at herself in the mirror, gave a little gasp of dismay and then began furiously to rub her nose and cheek with a ridiculously small handkerchief. Nat grinned. She was an extraordinarily pretty girl, smeared nose and all, tall and slim and vibrantly young.

She finished her emergency toilet, shook back her tousled hair and smiled.

"Now," she said. "I'm ready."

A building permit was granted to William Hetherington, who will erect a dwelling on Fifth street, near Elm.

Council received a bill for payment of the final installment on the recently installed coal pulverizer at the municipally owned electric light plant. Members of Council, however, did not approve the payment of the bill pending an adjustment of a charge of $1400 for engineering services. The cost of installation and equipment was approximately $25,000.

Gross receipts at the electric light plant during the past month totaled $6844.15. Expenses amounted to $5297.50 and the net earnings totaled $1546.65.

TEN GOOD BOUTS ARE BOOKED FOR CROYDON

CROYDON, Apr. 8.—Matchmaker Charlie Daggart, of the Croydon Arena, has arranged an attractive program for his show tonight. In the ten bouts he has paired off Joe Myers, Croydon youngster, against Jim Donnelly, a Nativty lad, who is said to be good. Sid Terman, of the Mason Club, and Charles Optizone, Nativty, Tommy Murphy, a shifty Kensingtonian, and Joie Schwartz, of Nativty.

Tom Myers, Croydon, and a brother to Joe, will make his appearance again after an absence of several months, against Jim Whitney, another Nativty youngster; Charlie Gottlieb, Mason A. C., vs. Larry Palmer, Nativty. These two boys are a fast, hard-hitting pair that should please the crowd, according to Daggart.

Jimmy Nocito, Croydon's favorite scrapper, will match his punch against Joe Flatch, of Kensington, a speedy and clever boxer, while Harry McCord, Kensington, will fight it out with Billy Bozzucio, of Mason A. C.

Willie Leighton, Croydon flash, will attempt to stretch his winning streak against Joe Martino, another Mason youth, who comes to Croydon with a reputation of being a knock-out artist. Ralph Ramono, Mason, and Francis McClay, Kensington, will battle in the semi-windup with Frankie Alice, of the Mason Club, tackling Mike McKasky, Nativty, in the wind-up.

THREE BRISTOL BOYS SECURE MATCHES HERE

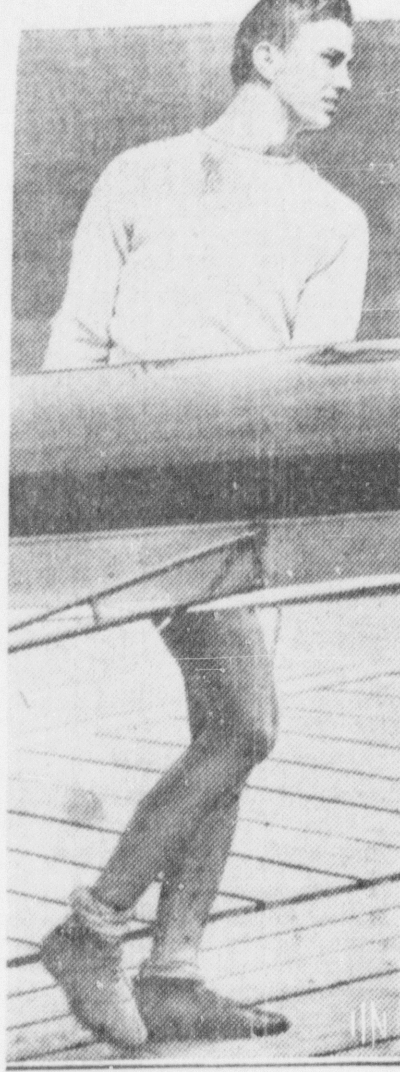

Matches have been secured for three Bristol boys to appear on the boxing show to be held in the Italian Mutual Aid arena, Monday night, April 13. The affair is being sponsored by the St. Ann's Athletic Association with the sanction of the Middle Atlantic District of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Jupes Zeffries has been matched with Frankie Falcone, Mason A. C. Falcone was scheduled with Zeffries in the last boxing show but Zeffries was ill and the bout was called off. Four weeks ago Zeffries, who is a high school boy, defeated Falcone on a close decision. The Mason warrior seeks revenge on the Bristolian.

Sammy Baiocchi, who won and lost a bout on the last card, has been matched with Tony Campagno, Mason. Campagno defeated Baiocchi several weeks ago. This bout was requested by Baiocchi who is determined to stop the Mason fighter. Baiocchi was knocked out by Ralph Mazzone after defeating an opponent in the last card.

Tony Puccio, the baker boy, is scheduled with Ralph Mazzone, Puc-cio is after revenge on Mazzone who holds victories over Baiocchi and Zettler, both St. Ann's fighters. Puccio is confident of beating the Mason fighter who has a record to be proud of, beating some of the best amateur fighters in the Philadelphia tournaments.

Last night matchmaker Patsy Moffo dispelled rumors that the St. Ann's club was booking fighters from the same club and matching them against one another. This positively will not happen on a St. Ann's card as opponents are always booked after a careful check-up by Moffo.

DR. LEN HALL TO WRESTLE WITH THE GIANT KILLER

TRENTON, Apr. 8.—That the return "grudge match" between Dr. Len Hall, Jersey Nebraska druggist, and Joe Cox, Ohio giant-killer, at the Arena tonight is arousing more than usual interest is evidenced by the advance sale.

Last week the match between these two natural rivals ended in a deadlock after 30 minutes of the wildest and most furious wrestling seen here in many months. Both are dynamic matmen and have a big stake in winning this encounter. They are two of the foremost of the newer crop of bone benders and are achieving national recognition for their aggressive and slam-bang methods of mat warfare. Hall is the leading public enemy of the Arena mat and in every appearance here has incurred the wrath of the fans who probably hate him more than any other wrestler who has done his stuff here. He does not hesitate an instant to take advantage of every opening and springs like a tiger to the "kill." He is relentless in his attack, asking for no quarter and giving none.

Cox has also made his mark at the Arena and has won the respect of the fans for his ability to hold his own with the best men in the game. Last week Joe downed Joe Savoldi and Emil Dusek and Abie Coleman and holds wins over ever one of the Dusek clan.

There is no love lost between Cox and Hall and tonight's fuss, if at all possible, should be more terribly fought than last week's affair.

A semi-windup of more than unusual interest is scheduled over the 30 minute distance between Al Bisignano, classy Italian youngster, and George "Crybaby" Koverly, another ace villain. Were any one but Hall and Cox in the wind-up, the bout between Bisignano and Koverly would likely steal the show.

In other bouts Sandor Vary, flashy Hungarian, meets Joe Campbell, New York champion, and Ivan Managoff, powerful Russian American, tangles with Laverne Baxter of Pittsburgh.

DOYLESTOWN HIGH READY FOR CAMPAIGN

Though only three lettermen return from last year, Coach Mike Beshel is shedding no fears about the prospects for his Doylestown High diamondmen, who will pry off the lid this afternoon at Quakertown High in a Bux-Mont Conference scrap.

The diminutive Seater mentor has welded together a formidable combination that he expects to show up far better than the club which played last year. True, such outstanding stars as Billy Power, flashy keystone, and Dan Emerson, ace pitcher, have moved along to other pastures, yet the Bucks county skipper is looking forward to an eventful season.

Beshel is loud in his praises for several youngsters on his nine. Ed Godshall, former Edison player, is the best natural player of the lot and aspires to hold down left field. Bob Raulston, a veteran, looks good at the initial sack since he has recovered his batting eye. Robert Miller is being groomed for third and shows plenty of promise.

To fill in Power's spot at second, Russell Wegman, Tabor Home player, has been showing up favorably. Though somewhat spotty as far as fielding is concerned he does not lack "power" when it comes to playing the wood against horsehide. In completing the infield Johnny Dunstan, a newcomer, will be posted at short stop.

The outer gardens, besides Godshall in left, will find Chris Miller, a letter-winner, in center, and either Harry Clark or Ray Axenroth fighting in the right sector.

Fritz Strowig, upon whom much faith had been pinned to carry the Seaters through in the pitcher's box, has been troubled by a sore knee and it may hamper his playing this season.

Emerson did the majority of the flogging last spring, but Strowig saw sufficient action to earn his letter. William Andre, a big righthander from Montgomeryville, seems to have plenty on the ball and may be called upon frequently. Witches McIntyre, stringy southpaw, and Dick Elville, tall right-hander, will also vie for sub pitching roles.

Bob Wikleman, a first-year man, will be in the catcher's box. He has shown power at the plate not only with the mask on but also with the bat in his hand. Phil Pfaff will be used as reserve.

BARLEY EXPERIMENTS

WALLA WALLA, Wash. — (INS) — Favorable results were obtained from experiments dealing with the production of malting barleys in the Walla Walla valley, according to H. C. Burgess, County agriculturalist. A test on experimental barley crops revealed three varieties which probably will yield a premium over feed barley, Burgess said.

TOOTHPICK MENACE

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — The lowly toothpick is the enemy of good teeth, Dr. Samuel Charles Miller of New York declared at a meeting of the Pennsylvania State Dental Society here. Over-use of the toothpick and of toothbrushes and chewing on pens and pencils injures the delicate tooth structure, Dr. Miller warned.
